At Mauk’s, we invite you to come and sit a spell, maybe even swap a story or two. Like the one about our building in downtown Historic Jonesborough.

It’s true, our store was once a post office, a doctor’s office, a barber shop, a taxi stand, a clothing store, and was at one time the oldest drugstore in Tennessee. It’s even true that the structure once burned down in December of 1873.

In a town rich with pride and legacy, the Mauk’s name still stands strong. Today, our store remains a centerpiece of Jonesborough.

Mauk’s is an exclusive dealer of Ekornes Stressless® Chairs and sofas, so when you come in, you’ll more than likely want to sit down and experience the warmth and unique experience our store has to offer.

We also carry Uwharrie® Chairs, Howard Miller® clocks, Tilley® hats, Byers Choice® figurines, Willow Tree® collectibles, plus Vera Bradley®, Bourbon and Boweties®, Spartina® handbags and Lampe Berger® fragrance lamps and oils and much more.

Other Jonesborough honors include: Being the first town in Tennessee to be listed on the National Register of Historic Places, being designated a Tree City USA town, being recognized by the White House as a Preserve America Community, and having received the Dozen Distinctive Destination Award from the National Trust for Historic Preservation. The town was also home to the maker of the great Tennessee State Seal.
Jonesborough’s tale begins over two centuries before the National Storytelling Festival. Storytelling was not the only first for Jonesborough—its historic district was among the first from Tennessee to be listed on the National Register of Historic Places, the county was the first district to be named in honor of George Washington, the first publisher of a periodical devoted exclusively to abolishing slavery was located here, and Jonesborough is the first and only home of the National Storytelling Festival. Stories make up the fabric of Jonesborough, and stories are a living oral tradition, history, and part of the town’s future.

In the 1700s, there were tales of fertile lands that circulated in the eastern colonies of America and drew immigrants to places in and around what would become Jonesborough. Such rumors led hundreds from Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and from overseas to travel the Great Stage Road. They came in sturdy wagons pulled by oxen, in Concord coaches, or simply on horseback, with little more than what could be carried in saddlebags.

Our stories, even today, are the undeniable remnants of these daring times. Here in Jonesborough, our stories speak of governments which rose and fell, duels fought, and men dying in battle. Daniel Boone trekked through these parts, and other men destined for greatness dwelt here. These men were considered rebels in the day, but are now the heroes of generations. Our nation was rising up, and Jonesborough played a major part in it all.

Pioneer Rebels with an Independent Cause

In 1772, people living on the Watauga and Nolichucky Rivers were uncertain if they were living in Virginia or North Carolina. They formed the Watauga Association, referred to by Theodore Roosevelt as “the first American-born men to establish a free and independent community on this continent.” This form of government worked for several years; however, it was in violation of King George’s Proclamation of October 7, 1763.

On July 5, 1776, a mere day after the Declaration of Independence was signed, the Watauga Association sent a petition to the Provincial Council of North Carolina. It stated that they had established a District with a court and a militia. A year later the General Assembly of North Carolina formed the District into the county of Washington.

North Carolina passed an enabling act where 100 acres of land would be reserved for the courthouse and public buildings of Washington County and a town established. Jonesborough was named after Willie (pronounced Wiley) Jones, a prominent patriot and statesman who always supported matters in the assembly of people in the West.
Freedom Rebels with a Lost Cause

During and after the Revolutionary War, a new breed of settlers made their homes along the Holston, Nolichucky, and Watauga Rivers in what is now Northeast Tennessee. These tough, staunch believers in freedom remembered the sacrifices they had made on behalf of North Carolina—fighting at King’s Mountain to defend the 13 colonies. When the North Carolina Assembly began to lay claim to these same settlers’ lands, many were upset and refused to pay taxes.

So it happened that on a hot steamy day in August of 1784, delegates from the farms and townships of three counties gathered for a convention in Jonesborough’s courthouse. A crowd waited anxiously outside as hours of deliberation ensued. Eventually, the doors to the log structure slowly opened, and a delegate stepped forward to read a proclamation. It had been decided that the three counties represented would separate from North Carolina and become an independent state. Cheers and shouts went up from many of the bystanders. But some shook their heads in disbelief. They did not want to form a separate state; they wished to remain a part of North Carolina. All was not well.

In the months that followed, more conventions were held. The new government was called Franklin, in honor of the noted statesman Benjamin Franklin of Pennsylvania, and the military hero John Sevier was elected governor. Dissenters to the new state followed John Tipton, who established a militia that worked to usurp the new state in the name of North Carolina. In the late 1780s, the state of Franklin was ceded to a new federal government known as the Southwest Territory, eventually to become a part of the state of Tennessee. Although the “Lost State of Franklin,” as it is now often called, did not survive, its history is a part of the colorful legacy of Jonesborough.

Abolitionist Rebels with a Good Cause

As Jacob Howard stooped over his worktable, he knew another edition of The Emancipator would soon be printed in Jonesborough. Elihu Embree, a local iron entrepreneur, was the editor and financier. The newspaper published letters, articles, and poetry that explained how slavery was wrong.

It particularly caused a stir when it first appeared in April of 1820. It was so popular that circulation grew to nearly 2,000 readers by October 1820. Jacob and Elihu were so excited about the paper’s popularity that copies were mailed to every governor in the South.

The son of a Quaker, Elihu had once owned slaves himself, but in 1812, he decided slavery was inhumane and immoral and became an enthusiastic worker for abolition. His home located near Jonesborough is believed to have been part of the “Underground Railroad.”

Although The Emancipator was published for only seven months, the paper’s existence was a significant part of the abolitionist movement. The publication ceased when Elihu Embree died in the fall of 1820. The last edition was distributed on October 30, 1820.

The first Courthouse to be built in what became the state of Tennessee was erected on this location in 1779. The Town of Jonesborough grew up around subsequent Washington County Courthouses, all of which stood on this public lot. As the seat of county government, Jonesborough lured lawyers, physicians and other prominent businessmen. By the mid 19th century, Jonesborough was a thriving center of commerce, connected by road and rail to the rest of the nation. Always the town’s anchor, Courthouse Square was the gathering place for businessmen who resided in town, as well as the farming communities located throughout the region. The steps of the Courthouse have seen livestock sales and trades, political speeches, numerous arguments, and demonstrations such as the Prohibition March in 1888.

Long ago, Jonesborough folks went to the Sally Hole for a swim. In the 1920s, Rudy Rhein and Jake Jackson, two owners of an ice plant in town, created Woodland Lake. They wanted to provide a place for the public to swim, picnic, and enjoy nature. People would pay an admission, change in the rooms beside the pool, and cook out in barbecue pits built in the woods beside the pool. Not many people owned bathing suits back then so they could rent one for 25 cents. When the day was over the bathing suits would be collected and washed for the next day. Families today can enjoy some of the same amenities and more at Wetlands Water Park, but bring your own suit!

Splash around

Today, the Wetlands Water Park provides guests a relaxing and enjoyable family experience. Families can splash around a rain tree, water bubblers, tumble buckets, tubes, and a zero depth wading area. Then, slide down an 80-foot enclosed fiberglass flume slide, a 200-foot giant fiberglass flume slide, or a children's otter slide.

Enjoy a Season Pass and come every day or host a private party after hours and have the whole place to yourself! Call 423-753-1553 for more information or visit wetlandsjonesborough.com.

Take a rest from all that water fun at the full service café, shaded pavilions, or covered dining area. After a rigorous game of volleyball on our sandy court, wash off in our shower facilities.

The Town of Jonesborough is committed to Wetlands; encouraging the entire family to participate together in an enjoyable and safe water experience.
STORYTELLING RENAISSANCE

The First National Storytelling Festival

In 1973, on a warm and sunny October day, Jonesborough residents rolled an old farm wagon into Courthouse Square for the first National Storytelling Festival. While the Festival was tiny, something happened that October weekend that has changed forever our culture, this traditional art form, and this Tennessee town.

They were there, the storytellers. A former Arkansas congressman. A Tennessee banker. A college professor. A western North Carolina farmer. They told their tales, and they breathed life into the first National Storytelling Festival.

And for the small group of people who sat listening—in chairs, on the curbs, cross-legged on the grassy green—there was a bond, a special connection between us and all who live and have ever lived. There were stories about people we had never met, times we had never known, places we had never been. Yet for those few magical hours, we did know them, we did go there.

The National Storytelling Festival, the first of its kind anywhere in the world, ignited a renaissance of storytelling that is, even today, continuing to sweep the globe, and transformed Jonesborough into the Storytelling Capital of the World.

And now, people across America and the world are rediscovering the simplicity and basic truth of the told story.

“More than anything else, the storytelling renaissance has been inspired by the National Storytelling Festival in Jonesborough, Tennessee.”

— Michael McLeod, Readers Digest

During the first National Storytelling Festival, Ray Hicks stood on the back of an old farm wagon and belted out The Heifer Hide—an ancient tale from the Southern Appalachian Mountains he had learned as a child sitting on his grandfather’s knee.

What to Do

Music on the Square

Music on the Square is a town event held each Friday evening, May through September. Music on the Square is Americana at its best, featuring live performances by local and regional bands, storytellers, poets, and performance artists. Many of the shops in Jonesborough stay open for these events, and the restaurants are full of diners and dessert seekers. Folks can visit, chat, enjoy the music and meet new friends as the bands play a variety of bluegrass, Celtic, old-time, blues or jazz. Now an official Jonesborough event, Main Street is blocked off to through traffic and plenty of parking is found behind the Jonesborough Courthouse.

Find stories that tickle your funny bone and warm your heart at the Jonesborough Repertory Theatre

This community welcomed the art of theatre as early as the late 1800s. At one time the third floor of Lampson Hall, built in 1871, served as a theater for plays and Vaudeville shows. Then in 1920, The Blue Mouse Theater opened on Main Street showing silent movies.

Since 1970, the Jonesborough Repertory Theatre (JRT) has remained a regional favorite by offering productions year round—from musicals and comedies to classics and readers theatre. In addition, JRT has a thriving educational program for students grades K–12, offering acting classes and three student productions per year. JRT values live theatre as an entertaining and educational event providing a unique opportunity for audiences and artists to share experiences that can be enjoyable, uplifting, and thought-provoking.

Restrooms are available, as well as handicap access for parking and seating. Each concert begins at 7 p.m. and everyone is invited to attend. Bring a chair or blanket, etc.

The Heritage Alliance

In 1966, Congress passed the National Historic Preservation Act, providing matching funds to states for preservation planning.

A small group of forward thinking individuals looked around and saw Jonesborough for the historic and architectural treasure that it is. With planning funds provided by the state, these individuals established the early civic and preservation organizations that saw to the restoration and preservation of the history of Tennessee’s oldest town. Today, these organizations have merged to form the Heritage Alliance, a regional organization dedicated to the preservation of the region’s architectural heritage, as well as the history and oral tradition of our area. The organization, a local partner of the partners network of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, works to educate the community through the development of innovative museum spaces, experiential learning, and technical preservation expertise. The Heritage Alliance offers a variety of resources throughout Jonesborough, including museum space in the Historic Jonesborough Visitors Center and in the Chester Inn State Historic Site. The downtown historic district provides a tangible representation of the rich history and heritage that the organization seeks to maintain for future generations. Go back to the days of yesteryear and connect with the artifacts and the importance of preservation with programs and museums offered by The Heritage Alliance.

Oak Hill School

Oak Hill School was built in 1886 to serve the community of Knob Creek, (now part of North Johnson City). The building served local residents as a school and center for community events until the 1950s. The property owners approached the Jonesborough/Washington County History Museum about saving the structure from destruction by relocating it to Jonesborough. In 1996, the school building was moved to Jonesborough and placed behind the Visitors Center. Oak Hill School was lovingly restored to its 1890s luster.

For unscheduled short tours, call the Heritage Alliance staff at 423-753-9580 or visit us in our office located directly in front of Oak Hill School.

Museum & Archives

The Jonesborough/Washington County History Museum and the Chester Inn Museum collect artifacts, documents and photographs to help tell the stories of the land and people who formed “the mother of Tennessee.” Our collection of artifacts, newspapers and other objects focuses on the social, cultural and economic history of Jonesborough and Washington County, creating a fascinating historical record of the region. Our extensive photographic collection spans the period from 1850 through the 1980s and features a number of photographs from early Jonesborough photographers L.W. Keen and O.L. Hensley.

We invite you to visit our museum located in the Historic Jonesborough Visitors Center. You can also visit our Main Street exhibits in the historic Chester Inn.

Free admission for the museums, minimal fee for programs, and donations are always welcome!

Early Visions of Commerce

Main Street stores have been the heart and soul of Jonesborough since the 1800s. The history of Main Street is as fascinatingly diverse as their merchandise. In the late 1800s and early 1900s, Main Street symbolized the town’s spirit, wealth, and expansion. The stores were more than businesses. They were where shoppers could listen to concerts, see fashion shows and art exhibits, learn golf or bridge, pay electric bills, and plan vacations.

Today, Main Street shops have stories that encompass many themes: the rise of decorative design, rediscovering roots, traveling abroad, being a kid in a nostalgic candy store, appreciating contemporary art, or learning the fundamentals of quilt design.

Children can accompany their family and friends downtown for a day of shopping and hand dipped ice cream. The warm and inviting personality of Jonesborough can always be read in its wide assortment of shops, restaurants and confectionaries. Now, as always before, service and style thrives in the Historic Main Street shops of Jonesborough.

Jonesborough Art Glass Gallery

The Gallery is located at 101 East Main Street, the very center of the business district. When the business was created in 1979, the Victorian cast iron columned building was a working studio space where beautiful stained glass windows and lamps were created, displayed, and sold. The town was sleepy, the rent was cheap, and the apartment upstairs made it possible for the owners, Steve and Tava Cook, to live and work in the same building, taking advantage of the inexpensive rent to the fullest. Relying mainly on craft shows around the southeast for the majority of their income, the Cooks would sometimes trade their work for the work of others, and bring home the artwork to sell, give as gifts, and begin their own collection of wonderful artwork from across the country.

New work is being sought each year to give the art lover a new selection several times yearly, and all artists are welcome to submit their work for consideration.

Jonesborough Art Glass Gallery is open all year from 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Extended hours are offered during the summer and the holiday season. Call for questions about current times.

Our special event facilities will provide you with superb architectural surroundings and inspiring ambiance that will give you stories for a lifetime.

Before there were architectural degrees, the men who designed buildings were called master craftsmen. The same master craftsman that built the 1847 Jonesborough Courthouse built the former Parson’s Table banquet facility. The Wedding & Event Loft served as a jewelry store for over 50 years selling many wedding bands and now there are many exchanges of wedding bands at that very location. The International Storytelling Center serves as a representation of storytelling in the millennium and hosts several events that will provide stories beyond the millennium.

Team Bridal Wedding & Event Loft

A romantic, Victorian wedding experience awaits you in the heart of Historic Jonesborough. Whether you choose to have your wedding ceremony in our quaint, candlelit chapel, or outside on the grounds surrounded by beautiful inviting flowers, we will take you back in time...to quieter, cherished times of days gone by. Our white horse-drawn carriage pulled by one of our “gentle giant” draft horses will add the perfect touch to a most romantic experience.

Fully catered receptions are offered in the adjoining 1820s elegantly decorated building, complete with fireplaces. No detail of your special day will be overlooked by our carefully chosen staff of professional photographers, videographers, florists, wedding cake bakers, consultants, and ordained ministers. We also offer tux rentals, invitations, and other special personalized accessories.

As you prepare for one of the most special days of your life, allow Team Bridal to help make all your wedding dreams come true.

Historic Jonesborough Visitors Center & Old Town Emporium

Since 1982 the Historic Jonesborough Visitors Center & Old Town Emporium has grown from having a small emporium with a shoebox to collect money from sales to an impressive gift shop with an eclectic variety of items including books, clothing, Tennessee products and artwork from local artisans. The Center hosts monthly exhibits of regional artwork; merchants exhibit displays of their wares; locals host receptions, parties, meetings, showers and weddings. Trade shows are held here along with many other types of events. The Center also offers a 300 person auditorium, as well as a 35 person community room with options for receptions, meetings, dances and more.

International Storytelling Center

Choose from our light filled parlor with its adjoining courtyard, or the more formal Library, with a balcony overlooking the historic district. For smaller meetings, choose the conference room inside the state owned Chester Inn Museum historic site, a space for the meeting of the minds since 1797. For presentations, lectures and performances we can offer the Storytelling Theatre, an intimate 95 seat theater with adjoining lobby, perfect for your VIP reception and presentation.

Have your event catered, or dine out at Jonesborough's unique restaurants.

Captivate your guests with our customized service, outstanding venues, and historic town. Book your wedding, meeting or performance at the International Storytelling Center.

Mill Spring Park Gazebo

Mill Spring Park is a popular green space in downtown Jonesborough complete with a gazebo that has served as a charming site for weddings and events. The Old Mill Spring is said to be one of the factors that led to the settlement of Tennessee's Oldest Town, and has been known to draw back visitors from across the globe. Enjoy your day with a picnic, party or wedding in the historic district with plenty of room for guests in the overlooking lawn.

The park is complete with a picturesque bridge over the legendary Mill Spring.

Inviting Tales
and Places to Stay

Our inviting tales will entice you with engaging accommodations from camping to award-winning bed and breakfasts. Relax in the natural mountain landscape, renew yourself at a health retreat, or enjoy yourself with a romantic getaway all in the historical ambiance of days gone by.

In 1797 Dr. Chester built the largest structure in town on the north side of Main Street. For more than a century it was the leading hotel in Jonesborough. The Inn's guests would sit around the fire and swap stories. Today, Jonesborough provides historic inns, a modern hotel, and bed and breakfasts all in the historic district. We invite you to stay and swap your story.

Time Stands Still in the Heart of Tennessee’s Oldest Town

The Historic Eureka Inn is located on Main Street in the heart of Downtown Jonesborough, voted One of the Prettiest Southern Streets in the Nation.

Come discover this boutique inn as it sets the standard for hospitality in the South. The Eureka offers many luxurious amenities but their friendly service is what sets them apart.

Each of their thirteen rooms is uniquely decorated in the style of the late 1800s; complete with a private bath and updated with all of the essential modern amenities, you truly will experience the best of both worlds.

Pull up a rocking chair and enjoy the view from one of their three inviting porches or stroll through their private organic gardens with a gazebo and brick courtyard. All perfect settings for a quiet romantic moment, or a large gathering of family and friends.

The Historic Eureka Inn is located across the street from the International Storytelling Center and directly beside the Jonesborough Repertory Theatre. Please call, visit their website, or stop in to speak with their Innkeepers to find more information about packages or special events.

Camping Tales

In the early 1900s, Henry Ford and Thomas Alva Edison were making their way from New York to Asheville, North Carolina, camping along the way. In Washington County they stopped at a private farm and camped for several days. Legend has it that Edison decided since he was in the South he would honor the Confederacy and name the camp Robert E. Lee. It became a media event with Jonesborough dignitaries and the press visiting the camp.

Today, you can create your own camping history at Persimmon Ridge Campground. If you are looking for a relaxing mountain getaway, soak in the surrounding natural elevated landscape. If you are looking for activities, make a splash when you take a short walk to Wetlands Water Park. Stop at the playground or basketball courts along the way and take a hike on the trails behind the Water Park. Take a short ride or long walk to historic Main Street, Jonesborough, where you will find history, culture, shopping, and unique dining.

Accommodations
Lodging Around Jonesborough’s Historic District

These Bedtime Stories are brought to you by the historic Bed and Breakfasts located near and in downtown Jonesborough. Please allow them to bring sweet dreams and peaceful memories to you and yours...

Once upon a time in a land not too far away, the first town in Tennessee was established. When the National Storytelling Festival first began, folks would invite visitors into their homes for the festival. As storytelling and the culture of the town blossomed, the need grew. Now, the town is bursting with art, theatre, music, specialty shopping, dining, and antique shops.

Eureka Inn
Built in 1797
Experience history at the beautiful Eureka Inn, located in the heart of downtown. The Historic Eureka Inn features 13 unique period rooms with modern and special amenities. You can enjoy the charm and beauty of a 19th century structure without sacrificing modern conveniences. Fully restored, the Inn is now a stop on the Tennessee Heritage Trail and has been featured on PBS’s Tennessee Crossroads and in Southern Living magazine.

Blair–Moore House Bed and Breakfast
Built in 1832
We focus on the culinary arts, southern hospitality and comfort of our guests. We have been recognized with many national awards for our breakfasts. Tami has studied at four prestigious culinary schools including Le Cordon Bleu in Paris, France, and will prepare a multi-course breakfast. Enjoy two rooms & one suite furnished with period Tennessee antiques. Amenities include air conditioning, private bathrooms, and private off street parking. Carriage House
Bed and Breakfast
Built in 1877
Stay in the Carriage House and servant’s quarters thought to be the site of the silversmith shop owned by the designer and engravers of Tennessee’s original State Seal. Breakfast is served in the two–story Victorian main house. In 1896 the home was remodeled to include large bay windows, decorative gables and front and back porches. Check out the stars by night or a bird’s eye view of town by day in the heated in-ground pool. Call 423-753-8005 or email nanseesbandb@gmail.com for your reservation.

Franklin House
Bed and Breakfast
Built in 1840
The Babb family resided in this home from 1869 until 1923 and their descendants still visit this cozy and relaxed home. It is conveniently located near the Main Street shops and restaurants. We offer three comfortable guest rooms, each with a private bath, and include a delicious full breakfast. A guest apartment with all amenities is available for extended stays. Wireless Internet access is provided throughout the home. Chuck and Dona Lewis, Innkeepers, offer helpful advice on in-town and area attractions and services. PC, CC accepted. For over half a century, until the coming of the railroad in 1857, the Great Stage Road was the main artery of travel from the cities of East to the South and Southwest. A stream of immigrants from Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, with others fresh from overseas, urged by stories of fertile lands brought all their possessions in great Conestoga wagons, often drawn by teams of oxen. For many years, this was the route over which virtually all manufactured and imported goods reached the East Tennessee market. Surrounding rivers were also used for commerce.

Dr. Samuel Cunningham was an internationally known physician and surgeon of the 19th century who was interested in bringing a transportation system to Jonesborough. His house was on Main Street and he wanted the tracks built in front of his house so he could watch the train go by from his porch. He put his medical practice on hold from 1849 to 1859 to serve as president of the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad. Cunningham and 29 other men, called “The Immortal Thirty,” put their own personal properties up for collateral in order to bring the railroad to town. Later, Dr. Cunningham returned to practice medicine. Much to his disappointment, the terrain forced the tracks to be built behind his house.
